When a skull or facial problem is identified, parents want immediate assurance that their child will receive the best possible treatment and care. They may have questions such as:

- Can my child's condition be corrected without surgery?
- How will this affect our child's growth and development?
- What will the future hold for my child?

Our multidisciplinary Head Shape Clinic, led by craniofacial surgeon Dr. Pat Ricalde, specializes in the evaluation, diagnosis and treatment of children with plagiocephaly. This condition is commonly caused by preferred sleeping positions, but may also be due to a malformed skull, torticollis, or other pathologic conditions.
